Introduction

A Word about Dictation

Just as Charlotte Mason taught handwriting in the context of an interesting passage or text, so she taught spelling, not in isolated lists of words but in the context of useful and beautiful language.

We can present the child with a list of words to learn, such as: “am, will, can, I, ought.” How much more pleasant to rearrange that list of words into an inspiring or interesting thought, like Charlotte Mason’s motto for students: “I am, I can, I ought, I will.”

Charlotte used this principle with prepared dictation to teach spelling, beginning in about the third or fourth grade. In prepared dictation, the student is given a passage to study before he is required to write it—the chief objective being to write it correctly.

Miss Mason believed that “the gift of spelling depends upon the power the eye possesses to ‘take’ (in a photographic sense) a detailed picture of a word; and this is a power and habit which must be cultivated in children from the first. When they have read ‘cat,’ they must be encouraged to see the word with their eyes shut, and the same habit will enable them to image ‘Thermopylae.’”

She discouraged teachers from allowing their students to see a word incorrectly spelt, for “once the eye sees a misspelt word, that image remains; and if there is also the image of the word rightly spelt, we are perplexed as to which is which.”

Of course, students will not spell every word correctly every time, therefore, it becomes “the teacher’s business to prevent false spelling, and, if an error has been made, to hide it away, as it were, so that the impression may not become fixed.”

“Dictation lessons, conducted in some such way as the following, usually result in good spelling.”

(Quotations from Home Education, pp. 240, 241)

How to Use Spelling Wisdom

1. Once or twice a week give your student a dictation exercise you want him to learn. Simply print or copy the exercise from this book. (You have permission to duplicate the exercises for use within your immediate household.)

2. Look through the exercise together and identify the words that you or the student thinks needs his attention in order to spell them confidently.

3. Instruct the student to study the identified words—one at a time—until he is sure he can spell every word in the exercise. This study period may take anywhere from a few minutes to several days, depending on the length of the exercise and the needs of the student. Set aside a little time each day for brief but consistent study of the exercise as needed. (See below for how to study a word.)

4. When the student is confident that he can spell every word in the exercise, dictate the passage to him one phrase at a time, saying the phrase only once. Pause after each phrase is spoken to allow him time to write it. Keep a careful eye on his efforts. If a word is misspelled, quickly cover it with a small self-stick note so its false spelling won't be engraved in the student's mind.

5. After the dictation is complete, the student should study any words that he misspelled and, when he is ready, write the words correctly on the self-stick notes.

How to Study a Word

You may want to work with younger or uncertain students to teach them how to study an unfamiliar word, as outlined below. Older students or students more accustomed to using the method below may study independently.

- Copy the word carefully, making sure it is spelt correctly.
- Look at the word until you can close your eyes and see it spelt correctly in your mind.
- Practise writing the word only if the teacher is nearby to immediately erase any misspellings.

Along with Charlotte's method of visualising the word, we might add one or two study techniques for students who like to use their other senses in the learning process.

- Say the letters aloud in order while looking at the word.
- "Write" the word with your first finger on a sheet of paper or other smooth surface, being careful to look at the word and spell it correctly.

How to Use This E-Book

Look for three ways to navigate quickly through this e-book.

About Spelling Wisdom

When I read about Charlotte Mason's method of using prepared dictation to teach spelling, I loved the idea and wanted to use it. But I was concerned about missing some necessary words as I selected dictation passages to use. I felt very secure using my traditional spelling lists that I knew included the most frequently used words in the English language, which my children definitely needed to learn to spell.

So I decided to try to combine the two: dictation exercises that I could be sure included the most frequently used words in the English language. The Spelling Wisdom series is the result of that effort.

The five books' exercises become progressively longer and contain more difficult words as you work through the series. Each book contains 140 exercises. If you cover two exercises per week, you should be able to finish a Spelling Wisdom book in a little less than two school years. Charlotte began dictation exercises with students around the third or fourth grade. With that schedule in mind, here is a rough model of which books correspond to which grades:

Grades 3–5	Book One
Grades 5–7	Book Two
Grades 7–9	Book Three
Grades 9–11	Book Four
Grades 11, 12	Book Five

Content

The exercises cover a broad range of subjects and topics to reinforce Charlotte's love of a full and generous education. Because the books are not thematic, you can use and benefit from the exercises no matter what you may be studying in other school subjects.

I wanted to keep Miss Mason's high standards for beautiful thoughts and engaging narratives, so the sources of these exercises are speeches, letters, and quotations of famous people; excerpts from historical documents; descriptions of historical people and events; poetry; Scripture; excerpts from great literature; and selections from old readers and books for young people. Most of the passages were written prior to 1900. (I did find it necessary to write a few original exercises that involved the more modern words, like "infrastructure" and "computer.") Each book's bibliography and table of contents will provide more specific information as to which sources were used.

The 6,000 most-frequently-used English words included in these exercises are taken from A General Service List of English Words by Michael West (Longman, London 1953) and The Academic Word List by Coxhead (1998, 2000). We have also included more than 6,500 other words that we think well-educated children should know. These bonus words are in addition to those on the lists, making a total of more than 12,500 English words covered in the Spelling Wisdom series of books.

Index

The index in the back of each Spelling Wisdom book will give you a list of all the words included in that book's exercises. If you want to concentrate on or review a particular word, just look in the book's index to find any other exercises that use it. The index should also prove to be a friendly help if you spot a word or two in the child's written narrations that need some attention. You can easily find and assign a dictation exercise that uses the word in question and reinforces its correct spelling.

Spelling Variations

Two versions of the Spelling Wisdom series are available: American and British. The British version contains the British spelling preferences that I'm aware of.

I thought long and hard about the -ise vs. -ize question. The Oxford English Dictionary cites either spelling as acceptable but states that -ise is more popular in both Britain and Australia. A poll of UK homeschool mums confirmed that more than seventy-five percent prefer the -ise spelling. Therefore, I elected to use -ise.

The main spelling differences you'll find in this British version (contrasted with the American version) are:

- our* instead of -or (as in honour)
- re* instead of -er (as in theatre)
- ise* instead of -ize (as in minimise)
- lled* instead of -led (as in travelled)
- lling* instead of -ling (as in equalling)
- t* instead of -ed (as in learnt)

Special thanks to Diane and Trudy for their valuable British insight! If I overlooked a possible alternate spelling, you can easily write your preferred spelling on the printed sheet that you give your student. (Then would you please e-mail me with the details of the change, or any other corrections, so I can change it in the book? Just contact us at <http://simplycm.com/contact>. Thank you!)

Poetry Variations

Many poets "take liberties" with word spellings in order to make the words fit in their assigned poetical places. Several of the poetry selections in these dictation exercises contained contracted words, such as "o'er" instead of "over." Since the goal of dictation is correct spelling, and missing letters don't help us reach that goal, I replaced contracted words with their spelt-out versions. You can easily enjoy the original form of the poems in your regular poetry studies, but for dictation purposes I thought the prudent path was to display the words correctly spelt.

Punctuation Variations

Because Charlotte advocated dictating "with a view to the pointing [punctuation], which the children are expected to put in as they write," I have attempted to edit the punctuation of the older passages to bring them more closely into conformity with modern punctuation guidelines. Encourage the children to make sure they are familiar with where the capital letters and punctuation marks go in their assigned exercises, even as they make sure they can spell all the words.

It is my hope that this collection of dictation exercises will make your journey more enjoyable and your path a little smoother on the "royal road to spelling."

(Quotations from Home Education, pp. 241, 242)

Exercise 1
A Book on Hand
By Charlotte Mason

Never be without a really good book on hand.

Exercise 2

Great Things

By Sir Winston Churchill

All great things are simple, and many can be expressed in single words:
freedom, justice, honour, duty, mercy, hope.

Exercise 3
Habits
By William Cowper

Habits are soon assumed; but when we strive to strip them off, it is being flayed alive.

Exercise 4

Responsibility

By Abraham Lincoln

You cannot escape the responsibility of tomorrow by evading it today.

Exercise 5
On the Truth
By Sir Winston Churchill

Men occasionally stumble over the truth, but most of them pick themselves up and hurry off as if nothing ever happened.

Exercise 6

Ride On

From David Copperfield by Charles Dickens

Ride on! Rough-shod if need be, smooth-shod if that will do, but ride on! Ride on over all obstacles and win the race!

Exercise 7
You May Deceive
By Abraham Lincoln

You may deceive all the people part of the time, and part of the people all the time, but not all the people all the time.

Exercise 8
On Adversity
By William Shakespeare

A wretched soul, bruised with adversity,
We bid be quiet when we hear it cry;
But were we burdened with like weight of pain,
As much or more we should ourselves complain.

Exercise 9
Exist Today
By Ralph Waldo Emerson

These roses under my window make no reference to former roses or to better ones; they are for what they are; they exist with God today.

Exercise 10

The Rain Ran Wildly

From A Tale of Two Cities by Charles Dickens

Up the two terrace flights of steps the rain ran wildly and beat at the great door, like a swift messenger rousing those within.

Exercise 11

On Habits

From George Muller of Bristol by A.T. Pierson

Habit both shows and makes the man, for it is at once historic and prophetic, the mirror of the man as he is and the mould of the man as he is to be.

Exercise 12
On Judging
By Plato

You are young, my son, and as the years go by, time will change and even reverse many of your present opinions. Refrain, therefore, awhile from setting yourself up as a judge of the highest matters.

Exercise 13
Be Always Ready
By Thomas Stonewall Jackson

My religious belief teaches me to feel as safe in battle as in bed. God has fixed the time for my death. I do not concern myself about that, but to be always ready, no matter when it may overtake me.

Exercise 14

Life Is Stranger

From The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

“My dear fellow,” said Sherlock Holmes, as we sat on either side of the fire in his lodgings at Baker Street, “life is infinitely stranger than anything which the mind of man could invent.

Exercise 15

The Ditch

From The Pilgrim's Progress by John Bunyan

I saw then in my dream, so far as this valley reached, there was on the right hand a very deep ditch; that ditch is it into which the blind have led the blind in all ages and have both there miserably perished.

Exercise 16
A Man Said to the Universe
By Stephen Crane

A man said to the universe,
“Sir, I exist!”
“However,” replied the universe,
“The fact has not created in me
A sense of obligation.”

Exercise 17

Michelangelo

From Pictures Every Child Should Know by Mary Schell Hoke Bacon

One critic has remarked that he loves to think of this strange man sitting before the marble quarry of Pietra Santa and thinking upon all the beings hidden in the cliff—beings which he should fashion from the marble.

Exercise 18

Cautious Utterance

From The Shoes of Fortune by Hans Christian Andersen

Behold, there are certain things in the world to which one ought never to give utterance except with the greatest caution; but doubly careful must one be when we have the Shoes of Fortune on our feet.

Exercise 19

Equal 100

From Amusements in Mathematics by Henry Ernest Dudeney

$$1\ 2\ 3\ 4\ 5\ 6\ 7\ 8\ 9 = 100$$

It is required to place arithmetical signs between the nine figures so that they shall equal 100. Of course, you must not alter the present numerical arrangement of the figures. Can you give a correct solution that employs the fewest possible signs?

Exercise 20

Sparrows

From Bird Neighbors by Neltje Blanchan

Sparrows are such gregarious birds that it is well to scrutinise every flock with especial care in the spring and autumn, when the rarer migrants are passing.

Exercise 21

That Punctual Servant

From The Pickwick Papers by Charles Dickens

That punctual servant of all work, the sun, had just risen and begun to strike a light on the morning of the thirteenth of May, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven, when Mr. Samuel Pickwick burst like another sun from his slumbers, threw open his chamber window, and looked out upon the world beneath.

Exercise 22

The Printing Press

By Johannes Gutenberg

“It is a press, certainly, but a press from which shall flow in inexhaustible streams . . . Through it, God will spread His Word. A spring of truth shall flow from it; like a new star it shall scatter the darkness of ignorance and cause a light heretofore unknown to shine amongst men.”

Exercise 23

Introspective Music

From The Adventures of Sherlock Homes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

“Then put on your hat and come. I am going through the city first, and we can have some lunch on the way. I observe that there is a good deal of German music on the programme, which is rather more to my taste than Italian or French. It is introspective, and I want to introspect. Come along!”

Exercise 24

A Riddle

By Hannah More

I'm a strange contradiction; I'm new, and I'm old,
I'm often in tatters, and oft decked with gold.
Though I never could read, yet lettered I'm found;
Though blind, I enlighten; though loose, I am bound,
I'm always in black, and I'm always in white;
I'm grave and I'm gay, I am heavy and light—
In form too I differ—I'm thick and I'm thin,
I've no flesh and bones, yet I'm covered with skin;
I've more points than the compass, more stops than the flute;
I sing without voice; without speaking, confute.
I'm English, I'm German, I'm French, and I'm Dutch;
Some love me too fondly, some slight me too much;
I often die soon, though I sometimes live ages,
And no monarch alive has so many pages.

Exercise 25

Beginning of a Day

From The Old Curiosity Shop by Charles Dickens

It was the beginning of a day in June, the deep blue sky unsullied by a cloud and teeming with brilliant light. The streets were, as yet, nearly free from passengers, the houses and shops were closed, and the healthy air of morning fell like breath from angels on the sleeping town.

Exercise 26
Want to Work
By Abraham Lincoln

Executive Mansion

Oct. 17, 1861

My dear Sir:

The lady—bearer of this—says she has two sons who want to work. Set them at it, if possible. Wanting to work is so rare a merit, that it should be encouraged.

Yours truly,
Abraham Lincoln

Exercise 27

Village in Japan

From Amusements in Mathematics by Henry Ernest Dudeney

There is a certain village in Japan situated in a very low valley, and yet the sun is nearer to the inhabitants every noon, by 3,000 miles and upwards, than when he either rises or sets to these people. In what part of the country is the village situated?

Exercise 28

The Lounging Figure

From The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

Our visitor glanced with some apparent surprise at the languid, lounging figure of the man who had been, no doubt, depicted to him as the most incisive reasoner and most energetic agent in Europe.

Holmes slowly reopened his eyes and looked impatiently at his gigantic client.

Exercise 29

Heaven Above Was Blue

From Nicholas Nickleby by Charles Dickens

Heaven above was blue, and earth beneath was green; the river glistened like a path of diamonds in the sun; the birds poured forth their songs from the shady trees; the lark soared high above the waving corn; and the deep buzz of insects filled the air.

Exercise 30
The Beatitudes
Matthew 5:3–12

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.

Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.

Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.

Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

Exercise 31

Hearty Laugh

From The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

Sherlock Holmes looked deeply chagrined. He drew a sovereign from his pocket and threw it down upon the slab, turning away with the air of a man whose disgust is too deep for words. A few yards off he stopped under a lamppost and laughed in the hearty, noiseless fashion which was peculiar to him.

Exercise 32

The True Workman

From George Muller of Bristol by A.T. Pierson

If much hangs and turns upon the choice of the work we are to do and the field where we are to do it, it must not be forgotten how much also depends on the time when it is undertaken, the way in which it is performed, and the associates in the labour. In all these matters the true workman will wait for the Master's beck, glance, or signal before a step is taken.

Exercise 33

This Is Your Victory

By Sir Winston Churchill

God bless you all. This is your victory! It is the victory of the cause of freedom in every land. In all our long history we have never seen a greater day than this. Everyone, man or woman, has done their best. Everyone has tried. Neither the long years, nor the dangers, nor the fierce attacks of the enemy have in any way weakened the independent resolve of the British nation. God bless you all.

Exercise 34

The City

From Dombey and Son by Charles Dickens

There was no wind; there was no passing shadow on the deep shade of the night; there was no noise. The city lay behind him, lighted here and there, and starry worlds were hidden by the masonry of spire and roof that hardly made out any shapes against the sky. Dark and lonely distance lay around him everywhere, and the clocks were faintly striking two.

Exercise 35
Signature with a Sentiment
By Abraham Lincoln

Washington

Jan. 5, 1849

Dear Sir:

Your note requesting my “signature with a sentiment” was received and should have been answered long since but that it was mislaid. I am not a very sentimental man; and the best sentiment I can think of is that if you collect the signatures of all persons who are no less distinguished than I, you will have a very undistinguished mass of names.

Very respectfully,
Abraham Lincoln

Exercise 36

An Ivory Miniature

From The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

“I brought this with me.” He opened a locket and showed us the full face of a very lovely woman. It was not a photograph but an ivory miniature, and the artist had brought out the full effect of the lustrous black hair, the large dark eyes, and the exquisite mouth. Holmes gazed long and earnestly at it. Then he closed the locket and handed it back to Lord St. Simon.

Exercise 37

Paris

From A Flight by Charles Dickens

The crowds in the streets; the lights in the shops and balconies; the elegance, variety, and beauty of their decorations; the number of the theatres; the brilliant cafes with their windows thrown up high and their vivacious groups at little tables on the pavement; the light and glitter of the houses turned, as it were, inside out soon convince me that it is no dream; that I am in Paris.

Exercise 38
Seal Lullaby
By Rudyard Kipling

Oh! hush thee, my baby, the night is behind us
And black are the waters that sparkled so green.
The moon, over the combers, looks downward to find us
At rest in the hollows that rustle between.
Where billow meets billow, there soft be thy pillow;
Oh, weary wee flipperling, curl at thy ease!
The storm shall not wake thee, nor shark overtake thee
Asleep in the arms of the slow-swinging seas.

Exercise 39

Durer

From Pictures Every Child Should Know by Mary Schell Hoke Bacon

Till Durer's time, however, there had been little painting that could be regarded as art, and when he came to study it there was but little opportunity in his own land, but Durer was destined to bring art to Nuremberg. If he went elsewhere to study, it was only for a little time, because he was above all things patriotic and dearly loved his home.

Exercise 40

Scenery

From A Tale of Two Cities by Charles Dickens

He lowered the window and looked out at the rising sun. There was a ridge of ploughed land with a plough upon it where it had been left last night when the horses were unyoked; beyond, a quiet coppice-wood, in which many leaves of burning red and golden yellow still remained upon the trees. Though the earth was cold and wet, the sky was clear, and the sun rose bright, placid, and beautiful.

Exercise 41

His Main Fault

From The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

“Oh, he has his faults too,” said Mr. Wilson. “Never was such a fellow for photography. Snapping away with a camera when he ought to be improving his mind and then diving down into the cellar like a rabbit into its hole to develop his pictures. That is his main fault, but on the whole he’s a good worker. There’s no vice in him.”

Exercise 42
Times That Try Men's Souls
From The American Crisis by Thomas Paine

These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of their country; but he that stands it now deserves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this consolation with us, that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph. What we obtain too cheap, we esteem too lightly: it is dearness only that gives everything its value.

Exercise 43

Stained Glass

From The Life of Jesus Christ for the Young by Richard Newton

In the cathedral at Lincoln, England, there is a window of stained glass which was made by an apprentice out of little pieces of glass that had been thrown aside by his master as useless. It is said to be the most beautiful window in the cathedral. And if, like this apprentice, we carefully gather up and improve the little bits of time, of knowledge, and of opportunities that we have, we may do work for God more beautiful than that cathedral window.

Exercise 44
To Speak in Public
From The Adventures of Tom Sawyer by Mark Twain

The exercises began. A very little boy stood up and sheepishly recited, “You’d scarce expect one of my age to speak in public on the stage,” accompanying himself with the painfully exact and spasmodic gestures which a machine might have used—supposing the machine to be a trifle out of order. But he got through safely, though cruelly scared, and got a fine round of applause when he made his manufactured bow and retired.

Exercise 45

A Strange Procession

From The Shoes of Fortune by Hans Christian Andersen

Suddenly was heard the sound of drums and fifes; the bright blaze of a fire shot up from time to time, and its ruddy gleams seemed to contend with the bluish light of the torches. The Councillor stood still and watched a most strange procession pass by. First came a dozen drummers, who understood pretty well how to handle their instruments, then came halberdiers and some armed with cross-bows. The principal person in the procession was a priest.

Exercise 46
Forbearance
By Ralph Waldo Emerson

Hast thou named all the birds without a gun?
Loved the wood-rose, and left it on its stalk?
At rich men's tables eaten bread and pulse?
Unarmed, faced danger with a heart of trust?
And loved so well a high behaviour,
In man or maid, that thou from speech refrained,
Nobility more nobly to repay?
O, be my friend, and teach me to be thine!

Exercise 47
The Heart That Feels Not
From The American Crisis by Thomas Paine

The heart that feels not now is dead; the blood of his children will curse his cowardice, who shrinks back at a time when a little might have saved the whole and made them happy. I love the man that can smile in trouble, that can gather strength from distress and grow brave by reflection. It is the business of little minds to shrink; but he whose heart is firm and whose conscience approves his conduct will pursue his principles unto death.

Exercise 48

A Gram

Do you know what a gram is? (No, we're not talking about your grandmother.) A gram is a way to measure volume, or mass. One gram is quite small, but one milligram is even smaller. A milligram is only one-thousandth of a gram. Vitamins are often measured in milligrams. Look at the label of any vitamin bottle in your house and see how many milligrams you can find. The abbreviation is "mg."

One thing you most likely won't find on a vitamin label is a kilogram. A kilogram is equal to one thousand grams. That would make a very big vitamin!

Exercise 49

A Favourite Game

The three sisters were playing their favourite word game. Each had some letter tiles with which to form words in crossword fashion. Mary added some letters to the board to spell “informal.” Heather quickly used two of her letters to change the word to “informally.” Darlene took some time to organise her tiles and determine which vowel she needed. Then she used all her tiles to connect two words on the board, spelling “international.” Mary and Heather applauded her efforts. They liked to compete, but they were good sports.

Exercise 50

Upbraiding

From Sanders' Union Fourth Reader by Charles W. Sanders

Grim: Thank you! Go on.

Cousin: I mean to; so don't be impatient. If an uncooked potato or a burnt mutton-chop happens to fall to your lot at the dinner table, what a tempest follows! One would think you had been wronged, insulted, trampled on, driven to despair. Your face is like a thundercloud all the rest of the meal. Your poor wife endeavours to hide her tears. Your children feel timid and miserable. Your guest feels as if she would like to see you held under the nose of the pump and thoroughly ducked.

Exercise 51

Tom As Robin Hood

From The Adventures of Tom Sawyer by Mark Twain

This was satisfactory, and so these adventures were carried out. Then Tom became Robin Hood again and was allowed by the treacherous nun to bleed his strength away through his neglected wound. And at last Joe, representing a whole tribe of weeping outlaws, dragged him sadly forth, gave his bow into his feeble hands, and Tom said, “Where this arrow falls, there bury poor Robin Hood under the greenwood tree.” Then he shot the arrow and fell back and would have died, but he lit on a nettle and sprang up too gaily for a corpse.

Exercise 52
The Signs of the Seasons
(Author Unknown)

What does it mean when the bluebird comes
And builds its nest, singing sweet and clear?
When violets peep among blades of grass?—
These are the signs that spring is here.

What does it mean when berries are ripe?
When butterflies flit, and honeybees hum?
When cattle stand under the shady trees?—
These are the signs that summer has come.

What does it mean when the crickets chirp,
And away to the south the robins steer?
When apples are falling, and leaves grow brown?—
These are the signs that autumn is here

What does it mean when days are short?
When leaves are gone, and brooks are dumb?
When fields are white with drifted snow?—
These are the signs that winter has come.

Exercise 53

Picking Strawberries

Sherry was hot and tired as she walked from the garage into the house. She plopped her pail of strawberries onto the table and slumped into a chair. Mum turned on the fan just as Sherry discovered a bright red stain on her skirt. With a sigh, she kicked off her shoes, put her feet up on a chair, and leant forward to sample a berry.

Mum handed Sherry a bowl and a spoon. “Here, you earned it,” she smiled. Sherry suddenly felt better as she dished out a large helping.

Exercise 54

The Actress

The actress sat in the waiting room; her head had begun to ache. She had obtained parts in both radio and film in her native country, but here she couldn't even understand the producer's instructions.

The sound of footsteps caused her to look up into the face of a kindly, older woman. "I'm here to help you," the woman said with a smile.

The actress smiled too, relieved that the studio had decided to appoint someone to translate.

Exercise 55

Two Trains

From Amusements in Mathematics by Henry Ernest Dudeney

I put this little question to a stationmaster, and his correct answer was so prompt that I am convinced there is no necessity to seek talented railway officials in America or elsewhere.

Two trains start at the same time, one from London to Liverpool, the other from Liverpool to London. If they arrive at their destinations one hour and four hours respectively after passing one another, how much faster is one train running than the other?

Exercise 56
Tobogganing
From The Story of My Life by Helen Keller

Our favourite amusement during that winter was tobogganing. In places, the shore of the lake rises abruptly from the water's edge. Down these steep slopes we used to coast. We would get on our toboggan, a boy would give us a shove, and off we went! Plunging through drifts, leaping hollows, swooping down upon the lake, we would shoot across its gleaming surface to the opposite bank. What joy! What exhilarating madness! For one wild, glad moment we snapped the chain that binds us to earth, and joining hands with the winds, we felt ourselves divine!

Exercise 57

A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing

By Aesop

A wolf found great difficulty in getting at the sheep, owing to the vigilance of the shepherd and his dogs. But one day it found the skin of a sheep that had been flayed and thrown aside, so it put it on over its own pelt and strolled down among the sheep. The lamb that belonged to the sheep whose skin the wolf was wearing, began to follow the wolf in the sheep's clothing; so, leading the lamb a little apart, he soon made a meal off her, and for some time he succeeded in deceiving the sheep and enjoying hearty meals.

Exercise 58

God Directs All Things

From The True Story of My Life by Hans Christian Andersen

My life is a lovely story, happy and full of incident. If, when I was a boy and went forth into the world poor and friendless, a good fairy had met me and said, “Choose now thy own course through life and the object for which thou wilt strive, and then, according to the development of thy mind and as reason requires, I will guide and defend thee to its attainment,” my fate could not, even then, have been directed more happily, more prudently, or better. The history of my life will say to the world what it says to me: There is a loving God, who directs all things for the best.

Exercise 59
The Pilgrims
From Swinton's Advanced Fourth Reader

The Mayflower had been tossing sixty-three days on the stormy Atlantic, when the Pilgrims were told that they were in sight of their new home.

They had left merry old England in the pleasant month of September; it was bleak November when they reached the desolate shore of New England.

For a month they sailed up and down the coast looking for a good harbour. At last they came into a sheltered bay, to which an earlier explorer, Captain John Smith, had given the name of Plymouth. They fixed on this as a good place for their settlement; and on the 21st of December, 1620, the Pilgrims landed.

Exercise 60

March

By William Wordsworth

The cock is crowing,
The stream is flowing,
The small birds twitter,
The lake doth glitter,
The green field sleeps in the sun;
The oldest and youngest
Are at work with the strongest;
The cattle are grazing,
Their heads never raising;
There are forty feeding like one!

Like an army defeated
The snow hath retreated,
And now doth fare ill
On the top of the bare hill;
The plowboy is whooping—anon—anon;
There is joy in the mountains;
There is life in the fountains;
Small clouds are sailing,
Blue sky prevailing;
The rain is over and gone!

Exercise 61

Same Product

From Amusements in Mathematics by Henry Ernest Dudeney

Here is another entertaining problem with the nine digits, the nought [zero] being excluded. Using each figure once, and only once, we can form two multiplication sums that have the same product, and this may be done in many ways. For example, 7×658 and 14×329 contain all the digits once, and the product in each case is the same—4,606. Now, it will be seen that the sum of the digits in the product is 16, which is neither the highest nor the lowest sum so obtainable. Can you find the solution of the problem that gives the lowest possible sum of digits in the common product? Also that which gives the highest possible sum?

Exercise 62
The Short-Billed Wren
From Bird Neighbors by Neltje Blanchan

Where red-winged blackbirds like to congregate in oozy pastures or near boggy woods, the little short-billed wren may more often be heard than seen, for he is more shy, if possible, than his long-billed cousin and will dive down into the sedges at your approach, very much as a duck disappears under water. But if you see him at all, it is usually while swaying to and fro as he clings to some tall stalk of grass, keeping his balance by the nervous, jerky tail motions characteristic of all the wrens, and singing with all his might. Oftentimes his tail reaches backward almost to his head in a most exaggerated wren-fashion.

Exercise 63
Repairing the Woodman
From The Wizard of Oz by L. Frank Baum

The tinsmiths looked the Woodman over carefully and then answered that they thought they could mend him so he would be as good as ever. So they set to work in one of the big yellow rooms of the castle and worked for three days and four nights, hammering and twisting and bending and soldering and polishing and pounding at the legs and body and head of the Tin Woodman, until at last he was straightened out into his old form, and his joints worked as well as ever. To be sure, there were several patches on him, but the tinsmiths did a good job, and as the Woodman was not a vain man, he did not mind the patches at all.

Exercise 64
Myles Standish
From Swinton's Advanced Fourth Reader

Myles (or as we now spell it, Miles) Standish was born in England about three hundred years ago. He came from a good family and was heir to a large estate, of which he was basely defrauded. He then became a soldier and helped the Dutch fight the Spaniards in Flanders. When peace came, he cast in his lot with the little band that sailed in the Mayflower, and his wife, Rose, accompanied him.

Our hero was short of stature but strong and athletic. He was full of energy and activity and daring, and he did not know the name of fear. It is said that he had a hot temper, but this did not spoil him for a soldier. And though he was rough, he was kindly.

Exercise 65

Three-Letter Words

Sam read the instructions in the magazine: How many three-letter words can you find in the letter puzzle below? The letters must be touching in order to make a word.

As he looked at the puzzle, he immediately saw “ton,” “rot,” and “jaw.” He looked closer and found “ash,” “mat,” “pad,” and “paw.” He discovered “male,” but then he remembered that the instructions said to find three-letter words, so he crossed it out. Sam had just noticed “inn” and “pig” when he was called in to the dentist and had to put down the magazine.

Exercise 66
The Wayfarer
By Stephen Crane

The wayfarer,
Perceiving the pathway to truth,
Was struck with astonishment.
It was thickly grown with weeds.
“Ha,” he said,
“I see that none has passed here
In a long time.”
Later he saw that each weed
Was a singular knife.
“Well,” he mumbled at last,
“Doubtless there are other roads.”

Exercise 67

Dorothy's House

From The Wizard of Oz by L. Frank Baum

Dorothy lived in the midst of the great Kansas prairies with Uncle Henry, who was a farmer, and Aunt Em, who was the farmer's wife. Their house was small, for the lumber to build it had to be carried by wagon many miles. There were four walls, a floor, and a roof, which made one room; and this room contained a rusty looking cook-stove, a cupboard for the dishes, a table, three or four chairs, and the beds. Uncle Henry and Aunt Em had a big bed in one corner and Dorothy, a little bed in another corner. There was no garret at all and no cellar except a small hole dug in the ground, called a cyclone cellar, where the family could go in case one of those great whirlwinds arose, mighty enough to crush any building in its path. It was reached by a trap door in the middle of the floor, from which a ladder led down into the small, dark hole.

Exercise 68

The Maryland Yellowthroat

From Bird Neighbors by Neltje Blanchan

And yet this is a bird that seems to delight in being pursued. It never goes so far away that you are not tempted to follow it, though it be through dense undergrowth and swampy thickets, and it always gives you just glimpse enough of its beauties and graces before it flies ahead to invite the hope of a closer inspection next time. When it dives into the deepest part of the tangle, where you can imagine it hunting about among the roots and fallen leaves for the larvae, caterpillars, spiders, and other insects on which it feeds, it sometimes amuses itself with a simple little song between the hunts. But the bird's indifference, you feel sure, arises from preoccupation rather than rudeness.

Exercise 69

A World of Comfort

From The Little Match Girl by Hans Christian Andersen

Her little hands were almost numbed with cold. Oh! a match might afford her a world of comfort, if she only dared take a single one out of the bundle, draw it against the wall, and warm her fingers by it. She drew one out. “Rischt!” how it blazed, how it burnt! It was a warm, bright flame, like a candle, as she held her hands over it: it was a wonderful light. It seemed really to the little maiden as though she were sitting before a large iron stove with burnished brass feet and a brass ornament at top. The fire burnt with such blessed influence; it warmed so delightfully. The little girl had already stretched out her feet to warm them too; but the small flame went out, the stove vanished; she had only the remains of the burnt-out match in her hand.

Exercise 70

An Inspiration

From The Adventures of Tom Sawyer by Mark Twain

But Tom's energy did not last. He began to think of the fun he had planned for this day, and his sorrows multiplied. Soon the free boys would come tripping along on all sorts of delicious expeditions, and they would make a world of fun of him for having to work—the very thought of it burnt him like fire. He got out his worldly wealth and examined it: bits of toys, marbles, and trash; enough to buy an exchange of work, maybe, but not half enough to buy so much as half an hour of pure freedom. So he returned his straitened means to his pocket and gave up the idea of trying to buy the boys. At this dark and hopeless moment an inspiration burst upon him—nothing less than a great, magnificent inspiration!

Exercise 71

Jumper the Hare

From Mother West Wind “When” Stories by Thornton W. Burgess

Turncoat isn’t considered a very nice name to call anyone. You see, it is supposed to mean one who has turned traitor, as it were—has been on one side and gone over to the other side. If a soldier who is fighting for France should go over to the German army and fight for Germany against France, he would be a turncoat. Benedict Arnold, of whom you have read in history, was a turncoat. But the meaning isn’t always bad. Just take the case of Jumper the Hare. In summer he wears a coat of brown, but in winter he wears a coat of white, the white of the pure driven snow. So you see, he is a turncoat, but in his case it doesn’t mean anything bad at all. On the contrary, it means something rather nice and very interesting.

Exercise 72

With a Map

From Amusements in Mathematics by Henry Ernest Dudeney

One of the everyday puzzles of life is the working out of routes. If you are taking a holiday on your bicycle, or a motor tour, there always arises the question of how you are to make the best of your time and other resources. You have determined to get as far as some particular place, to include visits to such-and-such a town, to try to see something of special interest elsewhere, and perhaps to try to look up an old friend at a spot that will not take you much out of your way. Then you have to plan your route so as to avoid bad roads, uninteresting country, and, if possible, the necessity of a return by the same way that you went. With a map before you, the interesting puzzle is attacked and solved.

Exercise 73
The Land of Story-books
By Robert Louis Stevenson

At evening when the lamp is lit,
Around the fire my parents sit;
They sit at home and talk and sing,
And do not play at anything.

Now, with my little gun, I crawl
All in the dark along the wall,
And follow round the forest track
Away behind the sofa back.

There, in the night, where none can spy,
All in my hunter's camp I lie,
And play at books that I have read
Till it is time to go to bed.

These are the hills, these are the woods,
These are my starry solitudes;
And there the river by whose brink
The roaring lions come to drink.

I see the others far away,
As if in firelit camp they lay,
And I, like to an Indian scout,
Around their party prowled about.

So, when my nurse comes in for me,
Home I return across the sea,
And go to bed with backward looks
At my dear land of Story-books.

Exercise 74

The Monster Trout

From Secrets of the Woods by William Joseph Long

For several days I had been trying every legitimate way, in vain, to catch a big trout, a monster of his kind, that lived in an eddy behind a rock up at the inlet. Trout were scarce in that lake, and in summer the big fish are always lazy and hard to catch. I was trout hungry most of the time, for the fish that I caught were small, and few and far between. Several times, however, when casting from the shore at the inlet for small fish, I had seen swirls in a great eddy near the farther shore, which told me plainly of big fish beneath; and one day, when a huge trout rolled half his length out of water behind my fly, small fry lost all their interest and I promised myself the joy of feeling my rod bend and tingle beneath the rush of that big trout if it took all summer.

Exercise 75
The Crow and the Pitcher
By Aesop

A crow, half dead with thirst, came upon a pitcher which had once been full of water; but when the crow put its beak into the mouth of the pitcher he found that only very little water was left in it and that he could not reach far enough down to get at it.

He tried and he tried, but at last had to give up in despair.

Then a thought came to him, and he took a pebble and dropped it into the pitcher. Then he took another pebble and dropped it into the pitcher. Then he took another pebble and dropped that into the pitcher.

At last, at last, he saw the water mount up near him; and after casting in a few more pebbles, he was able to quench his thirst and save his life.

Exercise 76

From the Declaration of Independence

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them; a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.

Exercise 77

Rembrandt's Speed

From Pictures Every Child Should Know by Mary Schell Hoke Bacon

There is a story which doubtless had for its germ a joke regarding the slowness of an errand boy in a friend's household, but which at the same time shows us how rapidly Rembrandt worked. The artist had been carried off to the country to lunch with his friend Jan Six, and as they sat down at the table, Six discovered there was no mustard. He sent his boy, Hans, for it, and as the boy went out, Rembrandt wagered that he could make an etching before the boy got back. Six took the wager, and the artist pulled a copper plate from his pocket—he always carried one—and on its waxed surface began to etch the landscape before him. Just as Hans returned, Rembrandt gleefully handed Six the completed picture.

Exercise 78

The Flower

From The Adventures of Tom Sawyer by Mark Twain

The boy ran around and stopped within a foot or two of the flower and then shaded his eyes with his hand and began to look down street as if he had discovered something of interest going on in that direction. Presently he picked up a straw and began trying to balance it on his nose, with his head tilted far back; and as he moved from side to side, in his efforts, he edged nearer and nearer toward the pansy; finally his bare foot rested upon it, his pliant toes closed upon it, and he hopped away with the treasure and disappeared round the corner. But only for a minute—only while he could button the flower inside his jacket, next his heart—or next his stomach, possibly, for he was not much posted in anatomy and not hypercritical, anyway.

Exercise 79
The Dandelions
By Helen Gray Cone

Upon a showery night and still,
Without a sound of warning,
A trooper band surprised the hill,
And held it in the morning.

We were not waked by bugle-notes,
No cheer our dreams invaded,
And yet, at dawn, their yellow coats
On the green slopes paraded.

We careless folk the deed forgot;
Till one day, idly walking,
We marked upon the self-same spot
A crowd of veterans talking.

They shook their trembling heads and grey
With pride and noiseless laughter;
When, well-a-day! they blew away,
And never were heard of after!

Exercise 80

Ducks' Ditty

From The Wind in the Willows by Kenneth Grahame

The Rat was sitting on the riverbank, singing a little song. He had just composed it himself, so he was very taken up with it and would not pay proper attention to Mole or anything else. Since early morning he had been swimming in the river in company with his friends the ducks. And when the ducks stood on their heads suddenly, as ducks will, he would dive down and tickle their necks, just under where their chins would be if ducks had chins, till they were forced to come to the surface again in a hurry, spluttering and angry and shaking their feathers at him, for it is impossible to say quite all you feel when your head is under water. At last they implored him to go away and attend to his own affairs and leave them to mind theirs. So the Rat went away and sat on the riverbank in the sun and made up a song about them, which he called "Ducks' Ditty."

Exercise 81

Grocer and Draper

From Amusements in Mathematics by Henry Ernest Dudeney

A country “grocer and draper” had two rival assistants, who prided themselves on their rapidity in serving customers. The young man on the grocery side could weigh up two one-pound parcels of sugar per minute, while the drapery assistant could cut three one-yard lengths of cloth in the same time. Their employer, one slack day, set them a race, giving the grocer a barrel of sugar and telling him to weigh up forty-eight one-pound parcels of sugar, while the draper divided a roll of forty-eight yards of cloth into yard pieces. The two men were interrupted together by customers for nine minutes, but the draper was disturbed seventeen times as long as the grocer. What was the result of the race?

Exercise 82
Stick To Your Purpose
By Abraham Lincoln

Washington D.C.
June 28, 1862

My dear Sir:

Your good mother tells me you are feeling very badly in your new situation. Allow me to assure you it is a perfect certainty that you will, very soon, feel better—quite happy—if you only stick to the resolution you have taken to procure a military education. I am older than you, have felt badly myself, and know what I tell you is true. Adhere to your purpose and you will soon feel as well as you ever did. On the contrary, if you falter and give up, you will lose the power of keeping any resolution and will regret it all your life. Take the advice of a friend who, though he never saw you, deeply sympathises with you, and stick to your purpose.

Sincerely your friend,
Abraham Lincoln

Exercise 83

The Cares of Housekeeping

From The Wind in the Willows by Kenneth Grahame

After so much open air and excitement, the Toad slept very soundly, and no amount of shaking could rouse him out of bed next morning. So the Mole and Rat turned to, quietly and manfully, and while the Rat saw to the horse and lit a fire and cleaned last night's cups and platters and got things ready for breakfast, the Mole trudged off to the nearest village, a long way off, for milk and eggs and various necessities the Toad had, of course, forgotten to provide. The hard work had all been done, and the two animals were resting, thoroughly exhausted, by the time Toad appeared on the scene, fresh and gay, remarking what a pleasant easy life it was they were all leading now after the cares and worries and fatigues of housekeeping at home.

Exercise 84
A Child's Mind
From The Story of My Life by Helen Keller

It was my teacher's genius, her quick sympathy, her loving tact which made the first years of my education so beautiful. It was because she seized the right moment to impart knowledge that made it so pleasant and acceptable to me. She realised that a child's mind is like a shallow brook which ripples and dances merrily over the stony course of its education and reflects here a flower, there a bush, yonder a fleecy cloud; and she attempted to guide my mind on its way, knowing that, like a brook, it should be fed by mountain streams and hidden springs until it broadened out into a deep river, capable of reflecting in its placid surface, billowy hills, the luminous shadows of trees, and the blue heavens, as well as the sweet face of a little flower.

Exercise 85
Stones, Pebbles, and Sand
From Home Geography for Primary Grades

Examine the stones found along the shore of a brook or river. Some are quite smooth and round. They were not always so, but had sharp edges. Do you know what made them round?

When there are heavy rains, the rushing water sweeps large stones down the mountainside and into the valley. As they are carried down the stream, the stones, by rubbing against each other, are smoothed and rounded and ground into pebbles. The pebbles themselves are ground at last into gravel and fine sand.

This is what the streams are doing everywhere—plowing deep furrows in the sides of the mountains, grinding the pebbles and sand into fine soil, and carrying it into the valleys below.

Exercise 86

A Fable

By Ralph Waldo Emerson

The mountain and the squirrel
Had a quarrel,
And the former called the latter “Little Prig”;
Bun replied,
“You are doubtless very big;
But all sorts of things and weather
Must be taken in together,
To make up a year
And a sphere.
And I think it no disgrace
To occupy my place.
If I’m not so large as you,
You are not so small as I,
And not half so spry.

I’ll not deny you make
A very pretty squirrel track;
Talents differ; all is well and wisely put;
If I cannot carry forests on my back,
Neither can you crack a nut.”

Exercise 87
Letter to Chopin
From Letters of Franz Liszt by Franz Liszt

Dear Chopin,

M. Benacci, a member of the Maison Troupenas, and in my opinion, the most intelligent editor and the most liberal in business matters in France, asks me for a letter of introduction to you. I give it all the more willingly, as I am convinced that under all circumstances you will have every reason to be satisfied with his activity and with whatever he does. Mendelssohn, whom he met in Switzerland two years ago, has made him his exclusive editor for France, and I, for my part, am just going to do the same. It would be a real satisfaction to me if you would entrust some of your manuscripts to him, and if these lines should help in making you do so, I know he will be grateful to me.

Yours ever, in true and lively friendship,
F. Liszt

Exercise 88

The Smileys

From Amusements in Mathematics by Henry Ernest Dudeney

When the Smileys recently received a visit from the favourite uncle, the fond parents had all the five children brought into his presence. First came Billie and little Gertrude, and the uncle was informed that the boy was exactly twice as old as the girl. Then Henrietta arrived, and it was pointed out that the combined ages of herself and Gertrude equalled twice the age of Billie. Then Charlie came running in, and somebody remarked that now the combined ages of the two boys were exactly twice the combined ages of the two girls. The uncle was expressing his astonishment at these coincidences when Janet came in. “Ah! Uncle,” she exclaimed, “you have actually arrived on my twenty-first birthday!” To this Mr. Smiley added the final staggerer: “Yes, and now the combined ages of the three girls are exactly equal to twice the combined ages of the two boys.” Can you give the age of each child?

Exercise 89

Eli Whitney

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

More than one hundred fifty years ago, a young man gazed over acres of plants covered with what looked like white blossoms. But they weren't white blossoms. They were balls of cotton, ripe for picking, and they meant a great deal of hard work. Not only was there the picking to be done but also the much harder task of separating every seed by hand before the cotton could go to the factory. This was slow business. The usual rate of workers was but a pound or two in a whole day.

Eli Whitney, for that was the young man's name, had the idea that machinery could be invented to separate the cotton from the seeds. He set to work and produced a machine that would do this. It was called the cotton gin, and it did the work so quickly that almost overnight the cotton industry of the South was changed.

Exercise 90

Salmon

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

Among the greatest travellers in the fish world are the salmon. It is no accident of nature that they spend their early days in fresh water, that they grow up in the salt water of the ocean, and that they return to the fresh water to die after the mother salmon have laid their eggs. This is the pattern of salmon life.

Every summer some of the full-grown salmon leave the ocean and follow the route of the rivers until they reach the high mountain streams. So anxious are they to reach this cold fresh water that they often travel a distance of at least a thousand miles. Nothing stops them unless they are captured by men or by animals.

When the fish have reached the end of their journey and have located the proper place for laying the eggs, the father salmon digs a kind of nest and the mother salmon lays the eggs. Salmon parents weren't meant to see their young, because they die before the eggs are hatched. The young salmon remain in the fresh water from one to three years before they travel to the ocean to complete the process of growing up.

Exercise 91
The Piece of Wood
From Pinocchio by Carlo Collodi

Centuries ago there lived—

“A king!” my little readers will say immediately.

No, children, you are mistaken. Once upon a time there was a piece of wood. It was not an expensive piece of wood. Far from it. Just a common block of firewood—one of those thick, solid logs that are put on the fire in winter to make cold rooms cosy and warm.

I do not know how this really happened, yet the fact remains that one fine day this piece of wood found itself in the shop of an old carpenter. His real name was Mastro Antonio, but everyone called him Mastro Cherry, for the tip of his nose was so round and red and shiny that it looked like a ripe cherry.

As soon as he saw that piece of wood, Mastro Cherry was filled with joy. Rubbing his hands together happily, he mumbled half to himself, “This has come in the nick of time. I shall use it to make the leg of a table.”

Exercise 92

Psalm 46

God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.
Therefore will not we fear,
though the earth be removed,
and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea;
Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled,
though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. Selah.

There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God,
the holy place of the tabernacles of the most High.
God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved:
God shall help her, and that right early.
The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved:
he uttered his voice, the earth melted.
The Lord of hosts is with us;
the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.

Come, behold the works of the Lord,
what desolations he hath made in the earth.
He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth;
he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder;
he burneth the chariot in the fire.
Be still, and know that I am God:
I will be exalted among the heathen,
I will be exalted in the earth.
The Lord of hosts is with us;
the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.

Exercise 93

Armistice Day

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

A day that will long be remembered in our country's history is November 11, 1918. On that day, at eleven o'clock in the morning, came the last bang of the last gun to be fired during the First World War. The armistice had been signed at five o'clock that morning, and the war with Germany was over. Our people nearly went crazy with joy!

The last battle had come to an end. Not another aeroplane would fly, not another tank would roll, not another gun would be fired. Thousands of lonely refugees could return to their farms and homes, if it was possible to find anything left of them.

Every American soldier, including every general and every other officer, must have thought at that moment of the great liner that would carry him home to his own country—and the faster, the better. Lately people had doubted if the war would be over very soon, but all at once the Germans asked for peace, and now they were laying down their arms.

Since 1918, November 11 has been a holiday and has been called Armistice Day.

Exercise 94

The Businessman

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

Mr. White is a businessman. He is the owner of three factories, and he has a very good man as manager of each.

At his factory in Boston, shoes are made. When leather and strong thread are scarce, the manager has a hard time to keep all the machines in operation.

Steel tools are the products manufactured by the Chicago factory. Since good tools are a necessity, the Chicago manager has very little trouble in getting the material his factory requires.

Mr. White and his secretary, Lloyd Wilson, spend one week of each month in Boston and one in Chicago, so that the owner may keep in close touch with his managers.

The other two weeks of the month Mr. White spends at his third factory, which is really his hobby. At a tiny little place in New York City, his workers make model aeroplanes for the government. Here Mr. White is like a boy in a toy shop. It gives him great pleasure to work on the models himself and to design new ones, trying always to improve the old.

Exercise 95

The Kingfisher's Den

From Secrets of the Woods by William Joseph Long

Years afterward I solved the second problem suggested by the kingfisher's den, when I had the good fortune one day to watch a pair beginning their tunneling. All who have ever watched the bird have, no doubt, noticed his wonderful ability to stop short in swift flight and hold himself poised in midair for an indefinite time, while watching the movements of a minnow beneath. They make use of this ability in beginning their nest on a bank so steep as to afford no foothold.

As I watched the pair referred to, first one then the other would hover before the point selected—as a hummingbird balances for a moment at the door of a trumpet flower to be sure that no one is watching ere he goes in—then drive his beak with rapid plunges into the bank, sending down a continuous shower of clay to the river below. When tired, he rested on a watch-stub, while his mate made a battering ram of herself and kept up the work. In a remarkably short time they had a foothold and proceeded to dig themselves in out of sight.

Exercise 96

A Little Old Trunk

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

One day Mary Adams' mother sent her to the attic to do some spring cleaning. Mary carried water, soap, and clean cloths up the stairs. You could hear her whistle as she climbed.

Sunlight was streaming in the dirty east window, and Mary decided to start in that corner. "I'll just move some of this stuff first," she said to herself, but her eye lighted on a little old trunk. Mary raised the lid.

Inside the trunk lay an old magazine. She glanced through it and found some notes in her grandmother's writing and a cross beside an article on how to cook cranberries. In an old box were a thin gold bracelet, a perfume bottle, and an old set of dominoes. There were yellowed posters about the public sale of Uncle Will's farm, and there was a large announcement of Grandpa Adams' funeral. Under all this Mary found an old fiddle. Grandma Adams' fiddle! Spring cleaning was forgotten as Mary drew the bow lightly across the strings.

Exercise 97

Metres

“Dad, what’s a kilometre?” asked Sarah.

“Well, you know what a metre is, don’t you?” Dad replied.

“Yes,” Sarah said, “but not a kilometre.”

“‘Kilo’ means one thousand,” explained Dad.

“So a kilometre is the length of one thousand metres?” Sarah deduced.

“Exactly.” Dad smiled. “Now think smaller and tell me what a millimetre is.”

“Oh, I know that one. ‘Milli’ means one thousandth, so a millimetre is only as long as a thousandth of a metre.”

“That would be pretty small,” commented Dad. “Think of dividing a metre into a thousand pieces!”

Sarah’s eyes twinkled. “Now I have one for you. Do you know how long a centimetre is?”

“Let me see, I believe a centimetre would be one hundredth of a metre,” Dad answered. “Is that right?”

“Yes! I remember that by thinking of a little centipede with his hundred tiny legs,” Sarah laughed.

Exercise 98
Concord Hymn
By Ralph Waldo Emerson

By the rude bridge that arched the flood,
Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,
Here once the embattled farmers stood,
And fired the shot heard round the world.

The foe long since in silence slept;
Alike the conqueror silent sleeps;
And Time the ruined bridge has swept
Down the dark stream which seaward creeps.

On this green bank, by this soft stream,
We set today a votive stone;
That memory may their deed redeem,
When, like our sires, our sons are gone.

Spirit, that made those heroes dare
To die, and leave their children free,
Bid Time and Nature gently spare
The shaft we raise to them and thee.

Exercise 99

The Butterfly and the Crocodile

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

A pale yellow butterfly flew here and there to taste the honey of the jungle flowers. It flew with careless ease over the back of a crocodile stretched out on a dry bank and taking a nap in the sun. It flew into the dark swamp where trees hung low over the water and a group of crocodiles lay just below the surface with only their bright eyes and the ends of their long noses showing above the water.

A puff of wind might have carried the pale yellow butterfly into a crocodile's mouth, but the butterfly was in no danger. These were African meat-eating crocodiles, from which there is no escape for man, bird, or fish. They are awfully fierce creatures and will even rush out of the water and chase their prey as far as their short, weak legs will permit!

The butterfly might have seen the crocodile's eggs in its flight—about thirty eggs laid in a dry nest on the bank, waiting to be hatched by the sun.

Exercise 100

Minstrels

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

All over Europe during the Middle Ages, men who appeared to be homeless wandered about providing music for the different communities. These men were poets who told stories in verse and set their verse to music. In England such wandering poets were called “minstrels.”

A minstrel who found favour with a king might remain for some time at court. The poet entertained with many a tune and many a story of the king's own brave deeds by the sword.

Most of the minstrels travelled, however, stopping now at this castle and now with that lord to enjoy a feast, to watch a tournament, to see a blue ribbon won. Many of these poets entered into the life of the community, too, by entertaining the poor folks.

The verse and music were often the minstrel's own invention, but he also told the old familiar tales and sang the old songs. In this way old stories and songs were preserved and handed down from father to son. We still sing some of these songs today.

Exercise 101

Orioles

From Bird Neighbors by Neltje Blanchan

The number of grubs, worms, flies, caterpillars, and even cocoons that go to satisfy the hunger of a family of orioles in a day might indicate, if it could be computed, the great value these birds are about our homes, aside from the good cheer they bring.

There is a popular tradition about the naming of this gorgeous bird: When George Calvert, the first Lord Baltimore, worn out and discouraged by various hardships in his Newfoundland colony, decided to visit Virginia in 1628, he wrote that nothing in the Chesapeake country so impressed him as the myriads of birds in its woods. But the song and colour of the oriole particularly cheered and delighted him, and orange and black became the heraldic colours of the first lord proprietors of Maryland.

Exercise 102

The Crossword Puzzle

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

Judy was doing a crossword puzzle that her father had cut from the newspaper. "Remember, Judy," Father had said in the morning, "you're going to do this one all by yourself!"

"Suppose I get stuck?" laughed Judy. "There are such hard words here!" But Judy hadn't got stuck so far. She could figure out "two letters meaning afternoon." That was "p.m." She could write the longest name for a day of the week in three letters: "Wed." She knew a short word for examinations: "exams." She knew the abbreviations of two months beginning with the letter A. They were "Apr." and "Aug." "Next after eighth" was, of course, "ninth."

Judy had to think a while to get some especially hard ones, like "the reply to a question," "dividing one number by another," and "the number of eggs most people buy." At last she wrote "ans.," "division," and "dozen." Just one more word and her puzzle would be finished! "What you put a letter in." Judy thought and thought. Was it "mailbox"? Oh, no. It is "envelope"!

Exercise 103

A New Colt

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

Late in the spring, in the bluegrass region of Kentucky, a new colt was born. His mother stood beside him where he lay in the great stable. After she had finished the hay in her manger, she turned and licked her colt, making soft noises in his little ears. He seemed to understand. Later in the day he managed to stretch his weak legs and pull himself up on his four feet. He drank his mother's milk, and she enjoyed having him at her side.

After a week or two, when the weather was warmer, the youngest colt and his mother were allowed outside in a small field behind the stable. Later they were allowed to join the other mothers and colts in the big pasture, where they could go wading in the brook.

One day as the youngest colt stood by the wire fence, he saw a splendid big horse running ahead of the others in a distant field. The colt asked his mother whether he would ever run like that. She answered proudly, "I will tell you a secret, young sir. You will run with those horses when you are grown up. Perhaps you will be an even greater runner than any of them."

Exercise 104

Lunch in Pairs

From Amusements in Mathematics by Henry Ernest Dudeney

Twelve men connected with a large firm in the city of London sit down to luncheon together every day in the same room. The tables are small ones that only accommodate two persons at the same time. Can you show how these twelve men may lunch together on eleven days in pairs, so that no two of them shall ever sit twice together? We will represent the men by the first twelve letters of the alphabet, and suppose the first day's pairing to be as follows—

(A B) (C D) (E F) (G H) (I J) (K L).

Then give any pairing you like for the next day, say—

(A C) (B D) (E G) (F H) (I K) (J L),

and so on, until you have completed your eleven lines, with no pair ever occurring twice. There are a good many different arrangements possible. Try to find one of them.

Exercise 105

Be Peace-Possessed

From Secrets of the Woods by William Joseph Long

A dog knows when you are afraid of him — when you are hostile, when friendly. So does a bear. Lose your nerve and the horse you are riding goes to pieces instantly. Bubble over with suppressed excitement and the deer yonder, stepping daintily down the bank to your canoe in the water grasses, will stamp and snort and bound away without ever knowing what startled him. But be quiet, friendly, peace-possessed in the same place and the deer, even after discovering you, will draw near and show his curiosity in twenty pretty ways ere he trots away, looking back over his shoulder for your last message. Then be generous — show him the flash of a looking-glass, the flutter of a bright handkerchief, a tin whistle, or any other little kickshaw that the remembrance of a boy's pocket may suggest — and the chances are that he will come back again, finding curiosity so richly rewarded.

Exercise 106

The Brook

From Home Geography for Primary Grades

From a fountain
In a mountain,
Drops of water ran
Trickling through the grasses;
So our brook began.

Slow it started;
Soon it darted,
Cool and clear and free,
Rippling over pebbles,
Hurrying to the sea.

Children straying
Came a-playing
On its pretty banks;
Glad, our little brooklet
Sparkled up its thanks.

Blossoms floating,
Mimic boating,
Fishes darting past,
Swift, and strong, and happy,
Widening very fast.

Bubbling, singing,
Rushing, ringing,
Flecked with shade and sun.
Soon our pretty brooklet
To the sea has run.

Exercise 107
More About Brooks
From Home Geography for Primary Grades

Would you like to know more about brooks and rivers—about the work they do?

Notice what happens when it rains. Little tiny streams are formed, which chase each other down the slopes. See how they cut away the loose soil and carry it off. Notice how muddy this loose soil makes the water. What becomes of this loose soil, or mud?

Fill a jar with water. Put in a handful of mud from the nearest stream. Shake the jar, and the water is muddy. Let it stand awhile. What do you notice? The water is clear, and the soil has settled to the bottom.

Follow the streams to the valley where they unite to form a river. When does the load of mud it carries settle? Here, where the water scarcely moves, we find some of the soil spread out over the ground near the riverbanks.

Exercise 108

A Colonial Kitchen

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

Daily life in colonial New England began and ended around the fireplace in the room at first called the “common room,” and later called the kitchen. The huge fireplace was patterned after those of England. Across it stretched a big green timber from which hung the pots and kettles, the pride of every colonist’s home. In time the green timber burnt through, and the burnt wood had to be replaced. Later, this timber gave way to an iron crane.

Each kettle, skillet, and pot of those times was made with legs so that it could be placed in the hot ashes without getting the food too hot. Every kind of pan and every spoon used to stir food was made with a very long handle so that the cook need not stoop nor get too close to the fire.

The early settlers did not prepare food in a great variety of ways. They would either boil or roast their meats and would mix all the vegetables together for boiling. When ovens were built into the chimney beside the fireplace, baking was done once a week as a special treat.

Exercise 109

Colonial Dishes

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

Opposite the fireplace in the colonial kitchen stood a dresser, or sideboard, holding the small supply of pewter which most families owned—a plate or two, a platter, a pitcher, jars, and mugs. Next to that, perhaps, was a cupboard containing the dishes for everyday use—wooden ones. The plates, which were known as “trenchers,” were about ten inches across, and each was made from a knot of wood, hollowed out in the centre. Knots from maples were considered the best. Husband and wife used one trencher, and two children ate from one.

The colonists used knives and spoons; not a single fork was used, even in England, at this time. Spoons were necessary because so much of the food consisted of soups, stews, or boiled cereals, like oatmeal. Sometimes a spoon was made of horn; other times, of wood, pewter, or silver. Almost every family possessed at least one silver teaspoon.

Everyday cups were wooden, and, with no thought of germs, they were handed around for all to use. There was no glass or china. Not till the end of the eighteenth century did fine teacups arrive from China.

Exercise 110
The Fox and the Cat
By Aesop

A fox was boasting to a cat of its clever devices for escaping its enemies. “I have a whole bag of tricks,” he said, “which contains a hundred ways of escaping my enemies.”

“I have only one,” said the cat, “but I can generally manage with that.”

Just at that moment they heard the cry of a pack of hounds coming toward them, and the cat immediately scampered up a tree and hid herself in the boughs. “This is my plan,” said the cat. “What are you going to do?”

The fox thought first of one way, then of another, and while he was debating the hounds came nearer and nearer, and at last the fox, in his confusion, was caught by the hounds and soon killed by the huntsmen.

Miss Puss, who had been looking on, said, “Better one safe way than a hundred on which you cannot reckon.”

Exercise 111

The Chimney Swift

From Friends and Helpers by Sarah J. Eddy

The chimney swift, or swallow, uses wood and glue in making the pretty little bracket-like basket he fastens to the chimney wall. His feet are so small that he cannot perch as other birds do, so when he rests, he clings to the side of the chimney and leans on his tail. Each tail feather is tipped with a stiff, sharp point that keeps it from slipping.

How then do you suppose he gathers the twigs for his nest? Watch him some day when he is flying rapidly about. You may see that he goes by a dead tree, and as he passes, he hovers for a second near the end of a limb. Then it is that he snaps off with his bill a small, dry twig for his home.

But how can he fasten a nest of twigs to the upright chimney wall? Well, the chimney swift carries a gluepot with him. It is in his mouth, where certain glands produce a sticky substance like mucilage. With this he glues the little twigs together and fastens them to the bricks.

Exercise 112

Doing Chores

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

It was Saturday morning in the spring. Mother and Father had driven off early in the truck to do the week's marketing and to buy the chicken feed. Betty was left at home to do the chores indoors while her brother Ben harrowed the south field. As she glanced out the window and saw Ben harness the greys by the barn door, she wished she were a boy. Then Ben came up to the house and told her that a disk was broken on the harrow and he would have to change it. If her work was finished when he was ready, she could ride on Bess!

Betty did her chores like lightning. First she had to wipe and put away the breakfast dishes. Then she had to mop the kitchen floor. In the living room she had to sweep the floor and rub wax over it and dust the furniture with a clean rag. Last of all, there was the cabbage to be sliced for dinner, the onions to be chopped, and the vinegar and sugar to be measured. All was ready for Mother to cook. Then Ben whistled, and, catching a sweater to wrap around herself, Betty ran out into the sunshine.

Exercise 113

Arithmetic Spelling

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

You will help yourself in doing arithmetic problems if you know how to use and to spell the arithmetic terms. Practise writing these words.

Do you know how to spell the common abbreviations used in arithmetic, such as “sq. mi.,” “hr.,” and “min.”?

Can you write the words for all the numbers from one to one hundred? When you get into the twenties, be sure to start using a hyphen. All the two-word numbers from twenty-one to twenty-nine have a hyphen.

In multiplication, we multiply a number by its multiplier. If we wish to multiply eighty by eleven, then eleven is the multiplier. Do you know that you can multiply any number by ten simply by putting a zero at the end of it? If we wish to take ten percent of a number, we put a decimal point between the last two figures.

In subtraction, the number taken away from another is the subtrahend. If we are subtracting eighty from ninety, eighty is the subtrahend. Do you understand the use of the term “borrow one” in subtraction?

Can you write the terms that are used in addition and division?

Exercise 114
The Gardener
By Robert Louis Stevenson

The gardener does not love to talk,
He makes me keep the gravel walk;
And when he puts his tools away,
He locks the door and takes the key.

Away behind the currant row
Where no one else but cook may go,
Far in the plots, I see him dig,
Old and serious, brown and big.

He digs the flowers, green, red, and blue,
Nor wishes to be spoken to.
He digs the flowers and cuts the hay,
And never seems to want to play.

Silly gardener! summer goes,
And winter comes with pinching toes,
When in the garden bare and brown
You must lay your barrow down.

Well now, and while the summer stays,
To profit by these garden days
O how much wiser you would be
To play at Indian wars with me!

Exercise 115

Sailing Ships

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

Anyone looking today at the rocky fields of New England can understand why, two hundred years ago, the men of nearly every settlement along the coast turned to the sea for their living, instead of to the soil—and can pardon them for it. The great variety of fish in the sea helped make the fishing industry a simple and natural development.

By about 1750 more than one hundred fifty ships were being constructed every year. Commerce with England and the West Indies went forward by leaps and bounds. A whaling voyage alone would sharpen the wits of any sailor, and visits to foreign lands provided excitement for a long time.

The American sailing ships, made just the right width and length for the greatest speed, had plenty of space to carry fish, flour, and tobacco to England and to bring manufactured goods home. Fish went to the West Indies, also, and the ships returned with sugar and with molasses for making rum. Ships began carrying passengers from seaport to seaport along the coast. Sea travel helped unite the widely separated colonies.

Exercise 116

Over the Bridge

From Around the World in Eighty Days by Jules Verne

The locomotive whistled vigorously; the engineer, reversing the steam, backed the train for nearly a mile—retiring, like a jumper, in order to take a longer leap. Then, with another whistle, he began to move forward; the train increased its speed, and soon its rapidity became frightful; a prolonged screech issued from the locomotive; the piston worked up and down twenty strokes to the second. They perceived that the whole train, rushing on at the rate of a hundred miles an hour, hardly bore upon the rails at all.

And they passed over! It was like a flash. No one saw the bridge. The train leapt, so to speak, from one bank to the other, and the engineer could not stop it until it had gone five miles beyond the station. But scarcely had the train passed the river, when the bridge, completely ruined, fell with a crash into the rapids of Medicine Bow.

Exercise 117

Fresh Deer Tracks

From Secrets of the Woods by William Joseph Long

In some of the paths were fresh deer tracks and the signs of recent feeding. My heart jumped at sight of one great hoof mark. I had measured and studied it too often to fail to recognise its owner. There was browse here still, to be had for the cropping. I began to be hopeful for my little flock and to feel a higher regard for their leader, who could plan a yard, it seemed, as well as a flight, and who could not be deceived by early abundance into outlining a small yard, forgetting the late snows and the spring hunger.

I was stooping to examine the more recent signs, when a sharp snort made me raise my head quickly. In the path before me stood a doe, all a-quiver, her feet still braced from the suddenness with which she had stopped at sight of an unknown object blocking the path ahead. Behind her, two other deer checked themselves and stood like statues, unable to see, but obeying their leader promptly.

Exercise 118

American Independence

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

The American colonies were slow to leave the British Empire. When the First Continental Congress was organised in Philadelphia in September, 1774, its purpose was to protest against unfair treatment. This was the first time that there was any kind of union among the thirteen colonies which were to become a nation. The congress put its objections on record, but no attention was paid to them. It closed in October but opened again on May 10, 1775. The colonists were angry about the Stamp Act, the tax on tea, the closing of the port of Boston, and above all, the firing on the men of Lexington. But they were not yet seeking their independence.

When George Washington was put in charge of the Continental Army, a great many people still wished to be governed by the empire. Not until Thomas Jefferson had written the Declaration of Independence, which the Second Continental Congress adopted on July 4, 1776, did most of the colonists see clearly where they stood. Because of this declaration, they began to realise that “all men are created equal” and have the right to “life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.”

Exercise 119

Writing an Essay

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

Suppose you were asked to write an essay on a topic of your own choosing. What would you do? Here is a good plan to follow:

1. Commence by choosing a topic on which you think you can find material easily. Go to a library to find books and articles from current magazines on your topic. Search the Internet for relevant and documented information.
2. When you read a book or an article, write down the title and the name of the author. As you read, make some notes—that is, write down the main facts.
3. Make an outline from the facts you have gathered. Put together the facts that belong in one unit. Each important point deserves an important position in the outline.
4. Now you are ready to write your essay. Write each paragraph as you planned it in your outline. See that all the words are properly spelt. Look in a dictionary if you are not sure. Give your essay an oral reading before handing it in.

Exercise 120

Bartering Animals

From Amusements in Mathematics by Henry Ernest Dudeney

Three countrymen met at a cattle market. “Look here,” said Hodge to Jakes, “I’ll give you six of my pigs for one of your horses, and then you’ll have twice as many animals here as I’ve got.”

“If that’s your way of doing business,” said Durrant to Hodge, “I’ll give you fourteen of my sheep for a horse, and then you’ll have three times as many animals as I.”

“Well, I’ll go better than that,” said Jakes to Durrant; “I’ll give you four cows for a horse, and then you’ll have six times as many animals as I’ve got here.”

No doubt this was a very primitive way of bartering animals, but it is an interesting little puzzle to discover just how many animals Jakes, Hodge, and Durrant must have taken to the cattle market.

Exercise 121
The Death of Lincoln
By William Cullen Bryant

Oh, slow to smite and swift to spare,
Gentle and merciful and just!
Who, in the fear of God, didst bear
The sword of power, a nation's trust!

In sorrow by thy bier we stand,
Amid the awe that hushes all,
And speak the anguish of a land
That shook with horror at thy fall.

Thy task is done; the bond are free:
We bear thee to an honoured grave,
Whose proudest monument shall be
The broken fetters of the slave.

Pure was thy life; its bloody close
Hath placed thee with the sons of light,
Among the noble host of those
Who perished in the cause of Right.

Exercise 122

English Sparrows

From Friends and Helpers by Sarah J. Eddy

While we find our own sparrows lovable, we are not so fond of the English sparrows, which have become more numerous than the native birds. The English sparrow, or finch, as he is more properly called, may be a troublesome visitor, but we invited him to come, and he is not to blame for some of his disagreeable ways. He is by no means useless, for he clears the gutters of quantities of unsavoury and unsightly fragments which would decay and become a nuisance if not removed. The English sparrow eats also a great many of the army worms which have done so much harm in some parts of the country, and he has in many places entirely destroyed the cankerworms.

He has good traits, and he may certainly be admired for his courage and perseverance. He bears our hard winters very cheerfully, and when no other birds are to be seen, he flies about, chirping as bravely as in the summer sunshine.

Exercise 123

The Constitution

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

Congress decided in February, 1787, that the Articles of Confederation, from which it got its power, needed to be changed. The confederation had proved to be weak, and a united government was necessary. Congress called for the appointment of delegates—citizens of the thirteen states—to a convention for revising the articles.

The convention opened in Philadelphia in May, 1787. The delegates soon decided to write a new constitution. One member, Governor Morris, copied it when it was finished, putting it into good English as he went along.

The new Constitution was short. It started with a preamble, or introduction. The first three articles state: first, that the legislative power should be in the hands of Congress; second, that the executive power should be in the hands of the President of the United States; and third, that the judicial power should be in the hands of the Supreme Court. Four other articles were concerned with the states, with amending the Constitution, and with some other matters. In 1791 ten amendments were added, known as the “Bill of Rights.”

Exercise 124

Work on the Prairie

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

In 1810 Mary Baines moved with her family to the Middle West. Though she was only eleven years old at the time, an examination of her letters shows how hard Mary worked in that first poor little home on the prairie. She wrote, “I was up early this morning to churn butter. My fingers were blue with cold. The lid wouldn’t stay on, and I was splashed with cream.”

Another time she said, “Wolves broke into our chicken coop last night. Father shot at them, but not before they made off with some of our best poultry.”

In the fall of 1811 she told of making a quilt. “If I have cut out one patch,” she wrote, “I have cut out a thousand. We have managed to scrape together a little money, because Mother preaches nothing but thrift all day long.”

Later Mary tells us that her father caught two mink in his river traps. She was happy because “one skin will make me a cap and the other will go on my blue coat.” Her mother had woven the material, and the blue dye had come from Boston.

Exercise 125

Grandmother's Cookbook

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

I was reading Grandmother's cookbook not long ago and was surprised at the rich food they ate. It was not a printed book but a small copybook in which the oft-tried recipes were written in a long, slanting hand. Cakes called for a dozen eggs and a pound of butter. Sauces were to be made "smooth with heavy cream." If a measure was given, it was "heaping tablespoons," a "good cup," or "dot with inch squares of butter."

The first part of the cookbook contained recipes for making pickles: sweet pickles, sour pickles, watermelon pickles, and spiced fruits. Grandmother had written a note on one recipe, "Not too much celery seed next time. H.R. (Grandfather) doesn't like it."

Then came the pies. The deep-dish cherry pie sounded delicious. She had recipes for cooking venison, quail, and rabbit with curry sauce. One whole page was devoted to "how to fry chicken in deep butter fat."

The most amusing little note she had written was on one of the cake recipes: "Use vanilla instead of almond flavouring. Almond is poison in H.R.'s stomach."

Exercise 126

Buttons Learns to Jump

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

Buttons was a small horse, rust brown in colour, lively, and full of spirit. Once he was out of the stable, he would switch his tail and lay back his ears if anyone tried to hitch him to a post and leave him there. When his saddle and bridle were on, he was anxious for that first wild run.

One summer Buttons' owner decided to train him for hunting, and this meant all the difficulties of jumping. The owner's plan was to let me ride Buttons and, thus, to train us both. I think Buttons understood, because he teased me right from the start.

Early one morning we rode our horses out to the ring. Buttons tossed his head and tried to refuse the lowest jumps, but I rode with a determined hand. He was rapidly approaching a two-foot jump when, midway, he stopped dead. I was thrown neatly over his head and landed on my feet—still holding a strap.

Poor Buttons! Nothing could prevent the lessons from continuing. I mounted and tried again. By fall Buttons had learnt to jump.

Exercise 127

Thanksgiving Proclamation

By Governor William Branford

Inasmuch as the great Father has given us this year an abundant harvest of Indian corn, wheat, peas, squashes, and garden vegetables, and made the forest to abound with game and the sea with fish and clams, and inasmuch as he has protected us from the ravages of the savages, has spared us from the pestilence and granted us freedom to worship God according to the dictates of our own conscience, now I, your magistrate do proclaim that all ye Pilgrims, with your wives and ye little ones, do gather at ye meeting house, on ye hill, between the hours of nine and twelve in the daytime on Thursday, November ye 29th, of the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and twenty-three, and the third year since ye Pilgrims landed on ye Plymouth Rock, there to listen to ye Pastor and render Thanksgiving to ye Almighty God for all his blessings.

Exercise 128
The Blue Jay
From Bird Neighbors by Neltje Blanchan

No bird of finer colour or presence sojourns with us the year round than the blue jay. In a peculiar sense, his is a case of “beauty covering a multitude of sins.” Among close students of bird traits, we find none so poor as to do him reverence. Dishonest, cruel, inquisitive, murderous, voracious, villainous are some of the epithets applied to this bird of exquisite plumage. Emerson, however, has said in his defence, he does “more good than harm,” alluding, no doubt, to his habit of burying nuts and hard seeds in the ground, so that many a waste place is clothed with trees and shrubs, thanks to his propensity and industry.

He is mischievous as a small boy, destructive as a monkey, deft at hiding as a squirrel. He is unsociable and unamiable, disliking the society of other birds. His harsh screams, shrieks, and most aggressive and unmusical calls seem often intended maliciously to drown the songs of the sweet-voiced singers.

Exercise 129

Major C

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

“Major C” is my favourite mystery. I picked him up in a tiny, dark shop in New Orleans, and now he hangs on the wall above my desk. Who he is, I have no idea, for he is only a small miniature, painted in colours that are still bright. Across the back is written “Major C, Drum Corps.”

That is all I know about him—or is it? His blue uniform suggests to which side he made his pledge in the War Between the States. I know his rank. He must have been a success as a major, because he was the holder of a military decoration, which is painted on his breast. Around his waist is a kind of sash with just the hilt of his gold sword showing above, and how clean and shining the blade is! “Major C” was young when this miniature was painted. There is a frank, boyish smile on his handsome face. If I could only give him the right signal, I might hear the rat-tat-tat of his drum.

I wish I knew how to find his family and return him to his rightful heirs. He’d be worth a lot to them—but think how I’d miss “Major C, Drum Corps.”

Exercise 130

Egyptian Pyramids

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

Once the Egyptian pyramids presented an interesting puzzle. This puzzle was solved some time ago. It is now known that they were built as tombs to keep secure the mummies, or dead bodies, of kings. The pyramids, constructed altogether of stone, probably by slave labour, are among the oldest existing buildings in the world. Older than any castles or forts or churches or temples, they date back nearly five thousand years.

Quite as interesting as the great tomb itself is the mummy which was hidden inside in a secret room. The Egyptians believe that physical life went on after death and that the body should, therefore, be preserved. They discovered a wonderful treatment, which took about ten weeks' time. After the body was prepared, it was neatly wrapped in strips of linen cloth, which were like a bandage. The mummy was then arranged in a painted wooden case and placed in its tomb. Food, clothing, jewels, and toilet articles were buried with the bodies to insure their physical comfort. Mummies of animals, as well as of people, can be seen in many a museum.

Exercise 131

Tookhees the Mouse

From Secrets of the Woods by William Joseph Long

A little way behind my tent was a great fallen log, mouldy and moss-grown, with twin-flowers shaking their bells along its length, under which lived a whole colony of wood mice. They ate the crumbs that I placed by the log; but they could never be tolled to my table, whether because they had no split-eared old veteran to spy out the man's ways or because my own colony drove them away, I could never find out. One day I saw Tookhees dive under the big log as I approached, and having nothing more important to do, I placed one big crumb near his entrance, stretched out in the moss, hid my hand in a dead brake near the tempting morsel, and squeaked the call. In a moment Tookhees' nose and eyes appeared in his doorway, his whiskers twitching nervously as he smelt the candle grease. But he was suspicious of the big object, or perhaps he smelt the man too and was afraid, for after much dodging in and out he disappeared altogether.

Exercise 132

A Tapestry

From The Pupils' Own Vocabulary Speller by Arthur I. Gates

An interesting historical document, which is now in a museum in France, is a piece of tapestry, not woven, but covered with embroidery. The pictures on it describe the Norman Conquest of England in 1066. This tapestry is larger than any other of its kind and was probably made to fit the wall of a certain church. Whoever designed and completed this tapestry was a real artist.

Not all tapestries are embroidered. In fact, most of them have no embroidery whatever; the designs are woven with linen, woollen, or silk threads. Some of the most famous tapestries are those made in Europe after the fourteenth century, known as “Gothic tapestries.”

Many of the Gothic tapestries picture outdoor scenes, in which noble ladies and gentlemen have come to attend a garden party. The colours are bright. Such tapestries served a double purpose. The floors and walls of castles were paved with stone. A beautiful wall decoration made the stone seem less bare; and as people walked up and down the stone floor, the outdoor scenes on the tapestries helped to make up for lack of windows.

Exercise 133
The Savanna Sparrow
From Bird Neighbors by Neltje Blanchan

In the lowlands of Nova Scotia and, in fact, of all the maritime provinces, this sparrow is the one that is perhaps most commonly seen. Every fence-rail has one perched upon it, singing “Ptsip, ptsip, ptsip, ze-e-e-e-e” close to the ear of the passerby, who otherwise might not hear the low grasshopper-like song. At the north, the bird somehow loses the shyness that makes it comparatively little known farther south. Depending upon the scrub and grass to conceal it, you may almost tread upon it before it startles you by its sudden rising with a whirring noise, only to drop to the ground again just a few yards farther away, where it scuds among the underbrush and is lost to sight. Tall weeds and fence-rails are as high and exposed situations as it is likely to select while singing. It is most distinctively a ground bird, and flat upon the pasture or in a slightly hollowed cup it has the merest apology for a nest. Only a few wisps of grass are laid in the cavity to receive the pale green eggs that are covered most curiously with blotches of brown of many shapes and tints.

Exercise 134

Glimpse of the Big Buck

From Secrets of the Woods by William Joseph Long

Once, when I looked down from a bare hilltop into a valley where the trail ran, I had a most interesting glimpse of the big buck doing the same thing from a hill farther on, too far away for a shot but near enough to see plainly through my field glass. The deer were farther ahead than I supposed. They had made a run for it, intending to rest after first putting a good space between them and anything that might follow. Now they were undoubtedly lying down in some far-away thicket, their minds at rest but their four feet doubled under them for a jump at short notice. Trust your nose, but keep your feet under you—that is deer wisdom on going to sleep. Meanwhile, to take no chances, the wary old leader had circled back to wind the trail and watch it awhile from a distance before joining them in their rest.

He stood stock-still in his hiding, so still that one might have passed close by without noticing him. But his head was above the low evergreens; eyes, ears, and nose were busy giving him perfect report of everything that passed in the woods.

Exercise 135
God Save the Queen
(British National Anthem)

God save our gracious Queen!
Long live our noble Queen!
God save the Queen!
Send her victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us,
God save the Queen.

O Lord our God arise,
Scatter her enemies
And make them fall;
Confound their politics,
Frustrate their knavish tricks,
On Thee our hopes we fix,
God save us all!

Thy choicest gifts in store
On her be pleased to pour;
Long may she reign;
May she defend our laws,
And ever give us cause
To sing with heart and voice,
God save the Queen!

Not in this land alone,
But be God's mercies known,
From shore to shore!
Lord make the nations see,
That men should brothers be,
And form one family,
The wide world over.

From every latent foe,
From the assassins blow,
God save the Queen!
Over her thine arm extend,
For Britain's sake defend,
Our mother, prince, and friend,
God save the Queen!

Exercise 136

The Way We Go

From Secrets of the Woods by William Joseph Long

I would only suggest that perhaps the real reason why we see so little in the woods is the way we go through them—talking, laughing, rustling, smashing twigs, disturbing the peace of the solitudes by what must seem strange and uncouth noises to the little wild creatures. They, on the other hand, slip with noiseless feet through their native coverts, shy, silent, listening, more concerned to hear than to be heard, loving the silence, hating noise and fearing it, as they fear and hate their natural enemies.

We would not feel comfortable if a big barbarian came into our quiet home, broke the door down, whacked his war-club on the furniture, and whooped his battle yell. We could hardly be natural under the circumstances. Our true dispositions would hide themselves. We might even vacate the house bodily. Just so Wood Folk. Only as you copy their ways can you expect to share their life and their secrets. And it is astonishing how little the shyest of them fears you, if you but keep silence and avoid all excitement, even of feeling; for they understand your feeling quite as much as your action.

Exercise 137

Travelling East

From Around the World in Eighty Days by Jules Verne

The train passed rapidly across the state of Iowa, by Council Bluffs, Des Moines, and Iowa City. During the night it crossed the Mississippi at Davenport and by Rock Island entered Illinois. The next day, which was the 10th, at four o'clock in the evening, it reached Chicago, already risen from its ruins and more proudly seated than ever on the borders of its beautiful Lake Michigan.

Nine hundred miles separated Chicago from New York; but trains are not wanting at Chicago. Mr. Fogg passed at once from one to the other, and the locomotive of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne, and Chicago Railway left at full speed, as if it fully comprehended that that gentleman had no time to lose. It traversed Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey like a flash, rushing through towns with antique names, some of which had streets and car-tracks but as yet no houses. At last the Hudson came into view; and, at a quarter-past eleven in the evening of the 11th, the train stopped in the station on the right bank of the river, before the very pier of the Cunard line.

Exercise 138

Up We Go!

From The Wind in the Willows by Kenneth Grahame

The Mole had been working very hard all the morning, spring-cleaning his little home—first with brooms, then with dusters, then on ladders and steps and chairs, with a brush and a pail of whitewash—till he had dust in his throat and eyes, and splashes of whitewash all over his black fur, and an aching back and weary arms. Spring was moving in the air above and in the earth below and around him, penetrating even his dark and lowly little house with its spirit of divine discontent and longing. It was small wonder, then, that he suddenly flung down his brush on the floor, said “Bother!” and “O blow!” and also “Hang spring cleaning!” and bolted out of the house without even waiting to put on his coat. Something up above was calling him imperiously, and he made for the steep little tunnel which answered in his case to the graveled carriage-drive owned by animals whose residences are nearer to the sun and air. So he scraped and scratched and scrabbled and scrooged, and then he scrooged again and scrabbled and scratched and scraped, working busily with his little paws and muttering to himself, “Up we go! Up we go!” till at last, pop! his snout came out into the sunlight, and he found himself rolling in the warm grass of a great meadow.

Exercise 139

The Town Mouse and the Country Mouse

By Aesop

Now you must know that a Town Mouse, once upon a time, went on a visit to his cousin in the country. He was rough and ready, this cousin, but he loved his town friend and made him heartily welcome. Beans and bacon, cheese and bread were all he had to offer, but he offered them freely. The Town Mouse rather turned up his long nose at this country fare and said, “I cannot understand, Cousin, how you can put up with such poor food as this, but of course you cannot expect anything better in the country; come you with me and I will show you how to live. When you have been in town a week, you will wonder how you could ever have stood a country life.”

No sooner said than done: the two mice set off for the town and arrived at the Town Mouse’s residence late at night. “You will want some refreshment after our long journey,” said the polite Town Mouse and took his friend into the grand dining room. There they found the remains of a fine feast, and soon the two mice were eating up jellies and cakes and all that was nice. Suddenly they heard growling and barking.

“What is that?” said the Country Mouse.

“It is only the dogs of the house,” answered the other.

“Only!” said the Country Mouse. “I do not like that music at my dinner.”

Just at that moment the door flew open, in came two huge mastiffs, and the two mice had to scamper down and run off. “Good-bye, Cousin,” said the Country Mouse.

“What! Going so soon?” said the other.

“Yes,” he replied. “Better beans and bacon in peace, than cakes and ale in fear.”

Exercise 140
Story of the Raindrops
From Home Geography for Primary Grades

Patter, patter, fall the raindrops on the brown leaves in the woods. Mr. Squirrel's bright eyes sparkle as he peeps out of his queer little home, a hole in the tree; his store of nuts has been carefully hidden away.

Splash comes a drop on a leaf just opposite him. Such a friendly little drop it is, for soon it tells this little woodland dweller of all its travels.

Let us listen, for we may hear too:

"My home," began the Water Drop, "is in the wide blue sea, where I live with many, many other drops.

"One day as we rode up and down on the big waves, the sun shone down on us and we grew warmer. Each little drop felt, 'Oh, if I could only get away from the other drops, how much cooler I should be!' Then each tiny drop separated from the others and grew so small you could not see it.

"We, of course, grew lighter, lighter than the air. Up, up we rose into the bright blue sky. When we got pretty high where the air was cool, we came closer together again and formed a great fleecy white cloud that cast its shadow over everything. Then a friendly wind carried us along, and soon we left the sea behind. Far below, we could see green fields and waving woods."

"You must have been very happy," said the little squirrel.

"Yes, it was a merry life we led as we floated hither and thither, playing with the sunbeams," replied the Water Drop.

"But we came at last to a purple mountain, and a chill wind began to blow. How we shivered with the cold! Then we huddled close together to get warm. We were now heavy again—so heavy that we could not stay up in the air.

"Then,

‘I’m going down to cheer a flower,’
Cried a little drop of rain;
‘I hear it sigh. It droops its head
As if in weary pain.’

‘And I will go!’ ‘And I!’ ‘And I!’
Cried all the raindrops near.
So down we went in merry haste
The whole wide field to cheer.

“The drooping flowers lifted their bright faces to thank the little drops for the cool drink. Even the great tall trees nodded their heads in welcome.”
